

SoHo Real Estate News

HERE IS SOME LOCAL NEWS

January 4, 2011

Thomas & Ingram, Soho's newest high-end boutique real estate office, has officially opened its doors.coveted Soho Building at 110 Greene Street in the heart of Soho, Thomas & Ingram is making a real presence in the neighborhood. They recently celebrated their opening with a swanky launch party where local property and business owners, colleagues and clients, ate oysters, toasted champagne glasses, and mingled with the city's bold and beautiful.

Thomas & Ingram Real Estate is a name to keep your eyes on. They are actively involved in the community, hosting regular events in their gallery-style loft office that are both educational, and beneficial to local charities and artists. Their most recent event, for example, featured some of the best works of Harvey Lloyd (a celebrated local photographer), and his show "Breaking the Light." Next up will be a lesser known, but native to New York artist, and then in February, they will be hosting a panel discussion lead by a power team of architects, interior designer's, and other specialty services, to discuss ways of increasing the value of your home in a soft market. The company also pledges a percentage of their income to a local charity of the clients' choice. This is not your run-of-the-mill real estate firm. Though boutique in size, they are a full service firm, offering management services for investors, unique buyer and seller representation services, and even have an office in Amsterdam, the Netherlands, dedicated to attracting European attention to New York properties. Size doesn't always matter. They pride themselves on "big firm" marketing capability, while providing high-end boutique service through their hand-picked power team of seasoned, smart, professional and tenacious agents. Needless to say, if you are looking to sell, buy, or rent, Thomas and Ingram is a great place to start, hear a fresh perspective, and to check out the unique-style services they offer. It is not every day that we come across a real estate company set out to have a positive influence in the community, and sees passion, integrity, and responsibility as their most integral goal. Drop in for a cappuccino at The Soho Coffee Pot, the first floor Café, then head on up to suite 805 to see what's currently on the market, accompanied by some exciting art.

If you are curious about what is on the market, visit their website at www.thomasandingham.com. It boasts one of the largest databases of listed properties in the New York City searchable in one place. (They are one of the few firms affiliated with both REBNY and the Manhattan MLS).